Understanding the Structure of AP World Review Questions

AP World review questions are designed to assess a student's knowledge of world history from approximately 1200 CE to the present. These questions mimic the format and difficulty of those found on the official AP World History exam, including multiple-choice, short-answer, document-based, and long essay questions. Understanding the structure of these questions is crucial for effective preparation. Each type of question targets different skills such as recall, analysis, synthesis, and argumentation.

Multiple-Choice Questions

Multiple-choice questions typically consist of a prompt followed by four or five answer choices. These questions test factual knowledge, understanding of historical concepts, and the ability to analyze primary and secondary sources. They often include stimulus materials such as maps, charts, or excerpts to assess interpretive skills.

Short-Answer Questions (SAQs)

Short-answer questions require concise written responses that directly address the prompt. These questions assess the ability to recall specific information, make connections between historical events and themes, and provide clear explanations. SAQs often include multiple parts, testing various aspects of a single topic.

Document-Based Questions (DBQs)

DBQs are essay questions that require students to analyze and synthesize information from a set of provided historical documents. These questions evaluate critical thinking, source analysis, and the ability to construct a coherent argument supported by evidence from the documents and prior knowledge.

Long Essay Questions (LEQs)

LEQs ask students to write in-depth essays on broad historical themes or periods. These questions test analytical writing, the ability to construct and defend a thesis, and the use of specific historical evidence to support arguments.

Effective Strategies for Answering AP World Review Questions
