The story's setting is confined mainly to the old man's house, which creates an intimate and claustrophobic atmosphere. The narrative unfolds through the narrator's perspective, focusing on the obsessive fixation on the old man's "vulture eye." This fixation drives the narrator to meticulously plan and execute the murder, followed by an increasingly frantic psychological unraveling. Understanding the plot and setting is crucial for interpreting the story's tension and the narrator's descent into madness.

Plot Summary

The story begins with the narrator addressing the reader directly, claiming he is sane despite his actions. He details his obsession with the old man's eye, which he perceives as evil. Over several nights, the narrator secretly enters the old man's room, waiting for the right moment to kill him. On the eighth night, the old man awakens, and the narrator kills him, dismembering the body and hiding the remains under the floorboards. When the police arrive, the narrator's guilt manifests as auditory hallucinations of the old man's beating heart, ultimately leading to his confession.
